One day, an old man went to a party in a big house. There was a lot of food and drinks, and there were a lot of people. Most of the people were in expensive clothes, but the old man was in old clothes. When he arrived, a servant told him to sit at a table for poor people. The people in good clothes were at different tables.

The servants brought food to the people in good clothes first. Then they brought food to the poor people. But the poor people got less food. Then the servants brought more food : meat, rice, green vegetables and potatoes. It was a big feast. The poor people got less rice and meat and less vegetables than the others. After that, there were fruit cakes, but the old man and the poor people didn't get any of them.

The old man was still hungry. So he got up and went home. He put on good clothes, new shoes, and his most expensive jacket. Then he came back to the party. The servant was standing at the door of the big house. The servant saw the old man's good clothes and welcomed him politely and took him to the best table. All the most important people were at this table, and there was a lot of food and delicious drinks. The old man sat down and ate his tasty food. Then he took off his jacket and put it on the food. "Why are you putting your jacket on your food?" the other people asked. The old man answered: "In this house, they think my clothes are more important than me. So my clothes must eat more than me!"
