It's on a busy street with no parking spaces. It has been open for five years. Now, it's a huge success. But things were not always this great.

When he first opened the restaurant, business was very slow. Mario was the only worker. He greeted guests at the door and seated them. Then he would start cooking. Each meal took about 60 minutes to prepare. Once Mario finished cooking, he would bring the food to the table. Most guests never returned, but often ordered takeaway.

Mario hoped to bring in more business. He asked customers about their opinions after each meal. Lately, the restaurant has gone through big changes based on customers' suggestions. Today, Mario's restaurant has two greeters at the front door. They welcome guests and show their seats. The kitchen has two more chefs. Now they can serve a meal in less than fifteen minutes. Lastly, it now offers free parking. This allows guests to drive right up to the door.
